Taronga Tiger exhibit

TARONGA Zoo has proposed the development of a new $14m Sumatran Tiger Adventure exhibit which will see the demolition of the existing carnivore facility.

Plans lodged with NSW Planning & Environment made public on Thu indicate the new facility will feature three exhibit areas.

The project will require the permanent relocation of some of Taronga's big cats to other zoos.

The zoo says the proposal is in line the State Govt's NSW 2021 - A Plan to Make NSW Number One project "by providing new facilities at Taronga Zoo to enhance the tourism offering in NSW for the international and domestic market".

Feb China arrivals surge

MORE than 160,000 Chinese tourists visited Australia in Feb this year, putting the country firmly at the top of Australia's source visitor markets, according to ABS figures released today.

The massive jump saw more than twice as many Chinese tourists visiting Australia as the next biggest market, New Zealand with 79,600 visitors.

The biggest increases for inbound tourism year-on-year in trend terms were for China, up 18.2%, as well as India which jumped 30% and South Korea which was up 12.5%.

Arrivals from Singapore dropped 3.2% while Malaysia was down 4.3% and Hong Kong fell 6.2%.

Overall visitor arrivals are up 4.8% year on year - slightly faster growth than outbound travel which was up 3.9% versus Feb 14.

New Zealand was the top destination, with 106,000 Aussies crossing the Tasman in Feb.

Indonesia was in second position with 68,300 followed by the USA in third spot at 54,500.

The figures reveal significant declines in visitation to Thailand, down 10.1%, and Malaysia which dropped 13.6% over the year.

Strongly growing outbound destinations included the USA, up 12.9% and Japan which rose 12%.

AA/QF seek 'equal footing'

THE revelation that American Airlines is planning to relaunch services on the Los Angeles-Sydney route from Dec (TD Wed) is expected to come under very close scrutiny from the ACCC.

That is because when American Airlines & Qantas sought approval in 2011 for their trans-Pacific Joint Business Alliance (JBA), the carriers said the US airline would not operate its own aircraft here.

In AA/QF's original submission to the ACCC the oneworld partners said: "As AA does not and has no intention to operate on the Trans-Pacific Routes, the Parties are not true competitors... and there can be no detriment to competition resulting from the implementation of the JBA".

When handing down its decision to approve the JBA 4 years ago, the Australian regulator said AA and QF "are unlikely to offer any competing services in the future" - and AA confirming this week that at the time it was not able to serve Australia due to equipment and labour agreement limitations.

However, AA now has Boeing 777-300ER aircraft at its disposal and ratified previous work place agreements (TD 14 Jun 11) since its merger with US Airways.

They told the US Department of Transportation "those constraints have been removed and the Parties propose to expand their collaboration", and that with a "more complete integration" they could "compete more effectively and on more equal footing with the immunised Delta (SkyTeam)-Virgin Australia and United-Air New Zealand (Star) alliances".

In seeking antitrust immunity for a revamped JBA, the carriers told the DOT their pact has been a "tremendous success for customers," with travel agents benefiting via a "new upfront commission program for American bookings on QF-operated flights".

AA and QF have also lodged a "restated Joint Business Agreement" with the ACCC to reflect the recent developments.

They are now also seeking "urgent interim authorisation" of the revamped alliance in order to facilitate the new AA LAX-SYD and QF SYD-SFO flights.

SkyTeam chair exiting

THE SkyTeam global airline alliance has confirmed chairman Leo van Wijk plans to retire from the position following the group's Governing Board meeting in Nov, a role he has held since 2007.

Stepping into the chairman's role will be current SkyTeam ceo Michael Wisbrun.

Delta Air Lines svp Europe MEA, Perry Cantarutti will commence in the position of SkyTeam Airline Alliance Management, taking over from Wisbrun from 01 Sep.

Eco-resort for Port Stephens

PLANS have been submitted for a new $230 million five-star international eco-resort at Anna Bay, Port Stephens in the Lower Hunter region of NSW, Travel Daily can exclusively reveal.

The proposed low-rise property, to be called The Bay Resort, will be located approximately 10kms south of west Nelson Bay and features up to 384 rooms/suites, split between a 150-room hotel and 219 holiday apartments.

According to the planning proposal submitted to the NSW Govt, the rural eco-resort will offer a restaurant, meeting rooms, gym, tennis courts, business facilities and swimming pools.

Spread over three levels, the hotel rooms will be an average of 75m², approximately 50% of which will be north facing.

The apartment facet of the project will be comprised of 3x3 storey blocks of additional tourist accommodation.

The Bay Resort will also feature a 700-seat capacity theatre and convention centre.

"Owing to the theatre and convention centre's flexible, multi-purpose characteristics, this will allow for a broader range of activities including live theatre, business, cultural events and exhibitions," architect Bob Young said in the Design Statement of the project.

"This should satisfy both international to domestic market needs," Bob Young added.

In its submission, The Bay Resort cited other relevant tourist facilities in Australia which complemented their setting, including Crowne Plaza Hunter Valley, Emirates Resort Wolgan Valley and The Byron at Byron.

Developers say the eco-resort will create at least 150 full time equivalent jobs once complete.

The project is open for public comment until 07 Aug.

Tren Ecuador on track in Aus

BILLED by Lonely Planet as one of the world's Top 5 "unmissable rail journeys", Tren Ecuador now has a dedicated voice to promote the product locally.

Hemisphere Marketing, headed by Claire Antell, is a new tourism marketing firm specialising in Latin American attractions and destinations.

The firm last week hosted agents and wholesalers in Sydney to an event in Potts Point to showcase the evocative rail experience and the destination of Ecuador on a wider scale.

Also attending was Aviareps, recently appointed the Australian representative for the Ecuador Ministry of Tourism (TD 14 May).

Spanning 448 kilometres from

Quito in the towering Andes to Guayaquil on the border of the Pacific Ocean, the four-day trip exposes guests to volcanoes, mountains, valleys and villages.

Tren Ecuador also takes pax into the Devil's Nose - widely regarded as the most treacherous stretch of navigable railroad in the world due to its steep inclines and zig-zagging corners.

The all-daylight adventure sees pax accommodated in lodges each evening to ensure not a centimetre of the view is missed.

Festival of Rugby kicks off

VISITBRITAIN and the British High Commission this week marked the countdown for the 2015 Rugby World Cup entering inside 100 days with a special event at the British Consul General's residence in Sydney.

The period marks the start of the Festival of Rugby, which was celebrated with Wallaby Greats George Gregan, Phil Waugh and current Wallaby Israel Folau.

In London, Prince Harry and ex-Lion Jonny Wilkinson launched the start of the 100 day Trophy Tour across Britain ahead of the start of the six week World Cup which commences on 18 Sep.

Today's Technology Update is brought to you by Amadeus IT Pacific.

We recently hosted a media roundtable to celebrate QBT being named the sole provider of travel management services to the Whole of Australian Government (WoAG).

The contract win saw Amadeus and QBT pair up to leverage best-in-class global technology and subject matter experts, to deliver a locally tailored solution for WoAG.

Understandably, WoAG is complex, so the winning solution needed to provide full transparency in real-time to manage duty of care for everyone in government, from defence to health workers.

Travellers from the 142 government agencies under the WoAG agreement will now access an integrated online and mobile global self-booking solution, Amadeus e-Travel Management (AeTM).

AeTM keeps control of corporate travel programmes whilst offering the traveller the best choice. For example, when corporate traveller John gets a phone call from his office while stuck in traffic on a business trip, his colleague tells him that he needs to be in Auckland the next day for an urgent meeting!

John uses his mobile to book his flight, hotel and his taxi transfers using Cabforce, all through AeTM from the taxi. His boss then receives an approval request for John's trip, and can review and approve with enough time for John to complete the booking without even stepping into the office.

More information on Amadeus' simple and seamless online booking solution, AeTM can be found here.

Hunter seaplanes

AUSTRALIAN hotel investor Dr Jerry Schwartz has proposed to launch a new seaplane service to support the Hunter Valley's tourism and conference division.

Blue Sky Airlines is planned to operate 6-seater aircraft between Rose Bay in Sydney to Cessnock Airport and Newcastle Harbour on a twice daily basis from Fri to Mon, commencing Oct.

"It will help establish the Hunter Valley as a 'premium' tourist destination, ideal for weddings, honeymoons and high-level incentive groups," Schwartz said earlier this week.

Additional flights could be added to the new Hunter Valley Conference & Events Centre or major concerts which are held regularly in the Hunter Valley.

Schwartz owns Crowne Plaza Hunter Valley & the Hunter Valley Conference & Events Centre, Crowne Plaza Newcastle and Novotel Newcastle.

Alquemie debuts

DESTINATION management company Wilderness Australia has this week reintroduced itself under the new corporate identity of Alquemie.

The privately-owned company specialises in top-shelf experiences & tailor-made itineraries around Australia - for details, see the new website, www.alquemie.com.au.

Four Seasons in hand

GUESTS staying at Four Seasons hotels worldwide can now access a range of services ahead of their stay via the newly launched Four Seasons smartphone app.

Designed to be user-friendly, the program allows guests to make reservations at multiple hotels at once, check-in and out, arrange luggage pickup & airport transfers.

Stays can also be customised, with guests able to pre-request extra pillows for their room, any forgotten toiletries, baby gear or turndown services as requested.

Room service, restaurant and spa reservations & golf tee times (where applicable) can also be secured using the new app.

CZ to push China with Canada

CHINA came together with Canada at an event in Sydney last night, as China Southern Airlines and Destination British Columbia sent out a message to travellers to try both on their next holiday.

With the Canton Route to London and Europe performing well in Australia, the route offers a new way for Aussies to connect to North America.

Vancouver however is largely unknown to the local trade as a destination served by CZ, the carrier said, something it is hoping to change as the only airline linking Guangzhou & Vancouver.

The route itself is quite popular in other markets, first launching in 2011 as three-times weekly and now about to go double-daily with the Boeing 787 Dreamliner.

The carrier will soon be pushing the route via a new advertising campaign to agents in Australia, with an underlying message encouraging a stopover in China.

Agents can expect to see marketing for the route rolled out soon, likely alongside a number of special offers, tactical fares and material promoting both cities.

Guangzhou is one of 14 cities in China participating in the 72-hour visa-free program, meaning pax with an onward ticket to a third country can spend three days in China without a visa.

Among the attendees was newly arrived China Southern managing director Australia & New Zealand Louis Lu, who recently swapped regions with former boss Henry He, now working in Los Angeles.

Lu is born & bred China Southern and is a native Guangzhouer.
