

Where in the world?

LARGE shuttlecocks aren't exactly the statues you imagine you'd see in the grounds of a museum, but this one has three scattered throughout its grounds, which are 5.5m high.

Do you know where this is?

Funnies Flashback

WE'VE trawled through the TD Window Seat archives to give you blast from the past. Here's some gems from 06 Jun 2012:

MOVE over Virgin Galactic - the latest space tourism venture is a company which plans to offer one-way tickets to Mars.

Mars One, a privately owned Dutch company, has set a target of establishing a colony on the red planet by 2023 - and all they need is lots of money and four space tourists willing to spend the rest of their lives there.

Spokesman Bas Lansdorp said that initially, rovers will be sent to Mars to scope out a good place for a settlement and construct "living units".

And then in 2022 the crew will take a "transit habitat" to Mars, to be joined every two years by a further group to help populate the new destination.

The genius plan is explained in a video which can now be viewed on YouTube.

A comment on the video claims the idea may not be original, saying "it's the same plan as [TV show] Terra Nova... without time travelling or dinosaurs".
