(ends September 30)

ALL INCLUSIVE 5 STAR LUXURY

TA launches domestic push

TOURISM Australia md Andrew McEvoy says he expects the second phase of the 'Nothing Like Australia' campaign (TD breaking news) to be even more successful than last year's initial promotion.

This time Aussies are being encouraged to share their own holiday experiences and nominate five friends and family as their 'Holiday Dream Team'.

Tourism minister Martin Ferguson said last year's launch attracted about 30,000 entries and also led to the "highly successful Oprah visit," with the campaign this time rewarding 16 of the most inspiring and creative entries with an Australian holiday for up to six people.

Luxury Lodges of Australia is partnering in the promotion, along with Qantas and Sony Music which will provide a music voucher for every upload.

Ferguson said that with the strong A$ making overseas holidays more affordable, the local industry needs to compete harder for the consumer dollar.

SQ earlybird launch

SINGAPORE Airlines today launched its earlybird fares for 2012, which for the first time offers seamless connections from 23 Virgin Australia ports incl a complimentary in-flight meal.

UK industry slams reform plan

A CONSULTATION period about the UK government's proposed changes to consumer protection in the travel industry has seen significant opposition to the plans from across the travel industry.

The revised ATOL (Air Travel Organiser's Licensing) deal would see the creation of three separate divisions - full ATOL, Flight Plus ATOL and Flight Only ATOL - and responses have generally criticised the added complexity of the proposed scheme.

The Association of British Travel Agents says the three levels of protection would lead to even greater consumer confusion, and also has serious concerns about the implementation timetable which would see the changes introduced on 01 Jan.

Thomas Cook said the altered scheme would allow airlines to offer identical holidays to those provided through tour operators, but without any requirement for protection.

"It's a recipe for customer confusion and distrust of an industry that is no stranger to business failures," said Thomas Cook director of external affairs, Andy Cooper.

"We maintain that the simplest solution is to protect all air travel, whether flight only or package holiday," he added.

The Association of ATOL Companies warned that under the proposed reforms more than one million passengers a year could lose existing protections.

"Far from increasing clarity, this will add to consumer confusion," the Association said.

Window Seat

EVEN Tourism Australia can't compete with rock and roll.

At this morning's launch of the new TA domestic campaign (p1) md Andrew McEvoy said the organisation's presence on Facebook is the second most popular Australian-based page, with 1.8 million fans in total, including 850,000 from Australia.

The only one that is more popular is the fan page for iconic Aussie rockers AC/DC - but they're a long way ahead, with more than 16 million fans.

DFAT is attracting worldwide attention for a new policy which will see Australian passport applicants able to specify their gender with three options: male, female and "indeterminate".

USA Today has picked up the story, intrigued at the new rules which allow "transgendered or intersex people" to get a passport in what they consider to be their true gender, but no longer be required to have "reassignment surgery".

The move has been strongly backed by Senator Louise Pratt - our first parliamentarian with a transgendered partner - who said there had been "many cases of people being detained at airports by immigration in foreign countries simply because their passports don't reflect what they look like."

Amadeus DOT fine

AMADEUS has become the first Global Distribution System provider to be fined by the US Department of Transportation for codeshare disclosure violations.

The DOT has fined Amadeus US$95K for providing software to travel agencies that led to their websites failing to inform when flights were operated under a codesharing agreement.

It said agents were required to get 'add-on software' that would enable data to be filtered.

"Many of Amadeus' travel agent clients did not install the add-on software properly, leading to screen displays that did not provide the required disclosure of codeshare flights," the DOT said.

Philippine ticket info

QANTAS is reminding agents that all international air tickets for travel originating from the Philippines must be issued from within the country.

In the event of such a situation a Prepaid Ticket Advice must be sent by Qantas in Australia to the carrier's Philippine ticket office.

Additional taxes, fees, charges and surcharges may also apply, so it's recommended agents request a quote from the Qantas Industry Centre to ensure the correct fare.

Fares must be quoted as sold in Australia and ticketed in the Philippines, and agents can submit payment by v-MPD via the Qantas Industry Sales Site or Online Service Ticket Request.

Today's issue of TD is coming to you from on board Disney Wonder sailing in Alaska, courtesy of Disney Cruise Line and V Australia.

TRAVEL Daily is cruising into Ketchikan, the "Salmon capital of the world" (and one of Alaska's most southern cities) onboard the beautiful Disney Wonder.

A highlight of this seven-night voyage is the delicious salmon steak BBQ on the aft deck.

While the Wonder caters mainly to families, Deck 5 forward is reserved for those 18 years and up, so couples and parents can have time together while the kids are supervised by the friendly crew.
