VA/NZ Tasman capacity push

SUBMISSIONS from Christchurch Airport and a coalition of organisations from Wellington have both called on the ACCC to enforce capacity conditions if it re-authorises the Tasman alliance between Virgin Australia and Air New Zealand.

Christchurch Airport says it's supportive of re-authorisation - as long as the carriers "maintain and grow a base level of capacity on the trans-Tasman as a whole".

CHC also wants VA/NZ to grow capacity on each of their current, and any future routes through the airport, and says it's "strongly opposed to the Alliance being approved unconditionally."

"With the Qantas Group/Emirates alliance in operation, the ACCC is now being asked to approve the other half of what could constitute a duopoly on the Tasman," the Christchurch submission states, citing "material competition issues raised by the dynamic of two alliances".

Similarly, the submission from Wellington also supports the reauthorisation of the deal, but only for three years and again with "continued appropriate capacity conditions".

If no conditions are applied, this would "have the effect of substantially lessening competition in the trans-Tasman air passenger services market between Wellington and Australia, without providing sufficient countervailing public benefits," the WLG group says.

Air NZ and Virgin Australia are seeking an unconditional five year renewal of their alliance.

Travel Daily

on location in Durban

Today's issue of TD is coming to you from South Africa, courtesy of South African Tourism.

INDABA wraps up today, after a whirlwind few days of updates from South African suppliers.

A major new addition this year was a 'Heritage and Culture Pavilion' which showcased the country's world heritage sites, leisure offerings, culture, art, design and music - all combining to tell South Africa's inspirational story, its history and its future.

After today, many delegates will stay on to experience some of South Africa's stunning tourism product for themselves.

SAT eyes sustained growth

THE head of South African Tourism believes the nation can sustain strong international arrivals by maintaining the country's points of difference and tapping into new markets.

In 2012, South Africa welcomed 9.2 million tourists from overseas, a 10.2% spike on the year prior and double that of the global trend (TD 29 Apr).

Chief executive officer Thulani Nzima told Travel Daily he hoped SAT could repeat the result.

Nzima said global consumer research had identified that 40% of tourists choose a destination that provides "a sense of personal and emotional connection."

"They are not looking for adventure or to escape from their realities anymore."

Tourists want to talk to people and learn something, such as arts or music, Nzima said.

He said distinguishing South Africa from "the clutter of various destination marketing out there" was achieved by ensuring factors such as the nation's culture and heritage were built into the "already successful tag of being a safari destination."

"We will do everything we can to make sure we continue on that kind of growth trajectory".

Nzima said that being realistic SA may not achieve the same level of growth due to a higher base, but if major overseas markets including Australia, can be successfully leveraged, then high growth was achievable.

"Currently we are not getting 1% of the Chinese outbound tourism market, or from the UK, the USA and Australia.

"If we collate all of this, if we can get just 1% of those markets, then I am sure we can achieve double-digit growth again," Nzima told TD.

MEANWHILE, SAT will push its branding further into new markets, with offices to open in Brazil, Angola, Kenya and Nigeria in the year ahead.

The organisation will also beef up its presence in South Korea, Russia, Scandinavia, Shanghai, Uganda, Tanzania and Ghana.

Coin toss question

DON'T forget to answer today's question in our Emirates comp, offering a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to be part of the ceremonial coin toss at this weekend's Collingwood-Geelong AFL game at the MCG (TD yest).

Emirates is Collingwood Football Club's premier partner, and to enter, answer the questions each day Mon-Thu this week.

Today's question is: Name one of Emirates' three newest European destinations?

Two tickets to the game on 18 May (but no flights or accom) are on offer - email answers, plus the name of your favourite team, to cointoss@traveldaily.com.au.

DVA unveils ANZAC 2015 ballot

THE Department of Veterans Affairs yesterday confirmed details of the ballot for places at the Gallipoli Dawn Service on ANZAC Day 2015 (TD 27 Sep).

Registrations for Australian citizens and permanent residents will open on 01 Nov 2013 and close on 31 Jan 2014, with the outcome advised in Mar next year "to ensure those successful have enough time to organise and pay for their trip," according to Minister Warren Snowdon.

The Australian and NZ governments will manage the centenary events on 25 Apr 2015, which will include the Dawn Service and subsequent services at Lone Pine and Chunuk Bair.

A total of 3,000 double passes will be available for Australians, with other places given to widows of Australian WWI veterans, direct descendants of veterans of the Gallipoli campaign, current war veterans and "representative secondary school children".

Snowdon said that most ANZAC tour operators had acted "very responsibly" thus far, but said any who had taken money for places at the event should "give it back".

See gallipoli2015.dva.gov.au.

New SAT ads coming

SOUTH African Tourism will roll out an all new promotional campaign designed to encourage audiences from across the globe to book trips.

A preview of the campaign was aired at the welcome ceremony of the 2013 INDABA tradeshow in Durban on Sat night.

According to SAT ceo Thulani Nzima, the ads are focused on improving the conversion rate from interest to booking.

The campaign includes two ads to be aired globally from next week, both featuring couples, and one with a pair of Aussie sisters who explored South Africa after winning a comp with SAT last year.

Nzima said the ads will show potential visitors "how you will be transformed when you meet South Africa."

Another facet of the campaign is a collection of 'Through the Lens' vignette images captured by National Geographic photographers.

Window Seat

AUSTRALIA is famous for many of its exorbitantly oversized landmarks such as the big prawn, the big banana & more.

Inland NSW Tourism has unveiled the next big landmark - known as Stanley the "Big Emu" - in the far western NSW town of Lightning Ridge.

"Stanley" (pictured below) is 18-metres tall and made of a mass of scrap metal, including three Volkswagon bodies and old satellite dishes - all donated by locals, so he is environmentally friendly.

The structure is likely to be the first in a line of "Sculptures by the Highway" which will be part of a competition supported by Lightning Ridge and Walgett Shire Councils.

VIRGIN Trains in the UK has postponed the launch of new staff uniforms over claims by the company's female staff that the outfits are see-through.

The firm has already spent £500,000 creating the outfits, so has created a stop-gap solution by issuing £20 vouchers so the ladies can buy suitable tops to wear underneath the blouses.

STA on the British bandwagon

PROMOTION of Great Britain to the Australian market is firmly on the STA Travel agenda following the visit to Australia this week of two high-ranking British tourism officials.

The STA head office this week welcomed Hugh Robertson MP - the British Minister for Sport and Tourism, who was in town along with VisitBritain chairman Christopher Rodrigues CBE.

Australia is the fourth highest spending market to Britain, with the most recent available figures showing Aussies added £1b to the British economy in 2011.

Statistics show the average Australian holidaymaker to Britain spends approx $1,300 during their trip, with the figure doubling for business visitors.

"STA Travel is proud to be a strategic partner for VisitBritain in Australia," STA Travel Australia md David Green said.

Green added his talks "were extremely positive and our discussions focused on how Britain will be a growth outbound tourism market in 2013/2014 for Australian travellers".

ZORBA The Greek dancing lessons at Athena Beach followed by dining at a local tavern were the reported highlights by this group of 15 Travel Counsellors, who all won places on a unique famil trip to the island of Cyprus.

Despite economic difficulties in the region, tourism is one avenue allowing the nation to stay strong, as proven by this opulent resort that hosted the group's stay.

Travel Counsellors partnered with Constantinou Bros Hotels in the town of Paphos for the trip, with the reward earned through an incentive called "The Race to Aphrodite" held earlier this year.

"I loved the incentive as it allowed me to strengthen my relationships with the agents in the other global offices," NSW Central Coast-based Travel Counsellor Trish Hollis reported.

"Although we did pack a lot into the trip, we were given time to revisit our favourite sights and areas and we were lucky enough to experience the facilities at the 5 star Asimina Suites Hotel which was a real treat," Hollis said.

During the seven-day trip, the group also inspected a number of the country's hotels to learn more to take to their customers.

Not convinced on 787

TWO passenger advocacy groups in the US are challenging the safety of the Boeing 787 Dreamliner until its revised battery structure is proven.

The groups are circulating a petition to Federal air regulators in the US calling for the aircraft to not operate routes that are more than two hours from the nearest airport at any given time.
