Directions next week

TOURISM Australia will host its annual Directions conference on Tue next week, this year taking place in Canberra's Great Hall.

Outgoing md Andrew McEvoy, Accor coo Simon McGrath and Flight Centre Ltd md Skroo Turner are among many speakers.

Proceedings will be moderated by ABC journalist Tony Jones, who will also oversee a panel discussion not dissimilar to the popular ABC debate program.

ATAS 'unshackles' industry

THE Australian Federation of Travel Agents new accreditation scheme has an official name, with the organisation branding the program 'ATAS - Travel Accredited' (TD breaking news).

Speaking at the unveiling, AFTA chief Jayson Westbury said the brand "gives life to a cornerstone element of the Travel Industry Transition Plan and delivers something that travel agents across Australia can now become very proud of."

The brand logo (pictured) features a raised 'T', representing the elevation of travel standards in the AFTA Travel

Accreditation Scheme (ATAS).

ATAS will boost travel standards so consumers can deal with ATAS accredited travel agents who are highly experienced, trusted and professional, AFTA says.

Westbury lauded the scheme's support over the past five years by NSW Minister for Fair Trading Anthony Roberts, telling Travel Daily it may not have gotten the plan through the door without the Minister's push.

Roberts said ATAS, which comes into effect from 01 Jul, has the ability to "unshackle" the industry, compared to the current Travel Compensation Fund platform.

He told the audience at last night's brand reveal in Sydney that ATAS will allow the industry to "grow and develop, utilising private enterprise rather than an antiquated system that was really holding the industry back."

The Minister said consumers can now be assured that "the person or persons or company they are dealing with have met with certain criteria."

Bunnik TV campaign

BUNNIK Tours will this weekend launch its first ever television advertising campaign.

The Europe themed promotion will focus on the benefits of small group travel, inviting viewers to start their own "Bunnik Tours story," according to md Dennis Bunnik, who appears in the ads.

Destinations featured include Russia, Turkey, Croatia, Italy, Slovenia, Portugal, Spain and Malta, with all footage shown filmed on actual Bunnik tours.

Initially being shown for four weeks on the Seven network in Queensland, the campaign is expected to eventually roll out to other markets as well.

Bunnik told TD that Qld had been selected for the launch as it's the tour operator's fastest growing market "and we're getting fantastic support from our agency partners up there."

"The adverts are tagged with the line 'see your local travel agent' so we expect that this will generate lots of enquiries for Queensland agents," he said.

The ad can be exclusively previewed on Travel Daily TV at traveldaily.com.au/videos.

Voyages' Klein steps down

VOYAGES Indigenous Tourism Australia md Koos Klein has resigned his position, saying he's unable to continue in the role in the wake of the organisation's board bloodbath (TD yesterday).

Klein has been operating the iconic Central Australian property on behalf of the Indigenous Land Corporation (ILC) since its 2011 purchase, overseeing significant projects including a major boost to Indigenous employment and the development of major new conference facilities.

Although yesterday's update from ILC chair Dawn Casey confirmed that Klein was one of the organisation's continuing directors, Klein has now considered his position and decided to step aside, according to The Australian.

"I have invested a lot of myself in this project and would appreciate the opportunity for a proper and professional handover in the interest of the company, the staff and especially the close to 300 Indigenous people who have found professional training opportunities and meaningful jobs with Voyages," he wrote in his resignation letter.

The ILC said it was taking "decisive action" by removing four board members including Tourism Australia chairman Geoff Dixon, after the book value of the Voyages property was written down by 25% (TD yesterday).

Voyages also oversees the Home Valley Resort in the Kimberley, plus the Mossman Gorge Cultural Centre near Cairns.

MEANWHILE, Voyages Indigenous Tourism also today confirmed that its upmarket Longitude 131° resort near Uluru will be managed by Baillie Lodges effective from 01 Nov.

The move was foreshadowed some months ago (TD 07 Jun), with Voyages saying the deal will allow the property to take its place alongside other Baillie operations including Southern Ocean Lodge and Capella Lodge.

The pact includes a commitment to Indigenous employment in partnership with Voyages, with plans including refurbishment and expansion of the luxury "tents" to include new interiors, outdoor lounging, fireplaces and a new dune top retreat with infinity pool.

More experiences will also be added, along with new premium "canopy" suites with fireplaces and a "stunning edgeless pool fronting Uluru".

TOURISM Ireland's communications manager Donna Campbell is departing today after nine years with the organisation in Germany, France and Australia.

She's been with Tourism Ireland in Australia since 2008.

JQ check-in revision

JETSTAR is adjusting check-in times for its short-haul international A320 services, giving passengers an additional 15 minutes to register for flights.

Taking effect from Sun 27 Oct, check-in for A320 int'l flights departing Australian ports will close 45mins ahead of departure, rather than 1 hour as at present.

"Jetstar is aligning its policies to make the experience of flying across the Asia Pacific region as seamless as possible for customers," the carrier said, with the change creating a uniform A320 international closure time for all Jetstar branded airlines.

Flight check-in remains at 60mins prior to departure for Jetstar's long-haul A330 and 787 services.

Bookings made via iPad tended to be for longer stays, while over a third were for budget properties.

ATAS to be driven by industry

NSW Minister for Fair Trading Anthony Roberts has commended the Travel Compensation Fund for its years of service to the trade, but admitted it was dated, saying it was “built for a different time”.

“It’s worked well and it served us well, and it has been very well managed and very well run, but we’ve got to look to the future,” the Minister told trade media at last night’s launch of the ATAS brand in Sydney.

The Minister said the launch of the ATAS was part of “future proofing” the industry.

“With a rise in people utilising offshore companies to book, we wanted to put in place the best protections and ability for our people here - that take the risks, employ people, provide a great service - put them in the very best place to compete.

“This is taking us up to the next level of competition... not just as a state, but as a nation,” he said.

Consumers will know that businesses that are linked to the ATAS have ticked all the boxes, are part of the broader travel industry family and bring superior service and knowledge that are keen to look after their own,” Roberts said.
