Wicked saga rolls on

THE Tasmanian Government is backing the Queensland Govt's move to deregister Wicked Campers vans displaying offensive slogans (TD Fri).

Rene Hidding, Minister for Infrastructure said the Tas Govt would consider taking similar action if the company attempted to register the vans in the state.

"I have been investigating possible regulatory or legislative options to stop these vile, sexist and misogynistic vans from operating in Tasmania," Hidding said in a statement, adding he has confirmed the owners of these vehicles are likely in breach of the Anti-Discrimination Act.

MH370 search to end

IF MALAYSIAN Airlines' flight MH370 is not found within the 120,000km² search area, the three-country hunt for the plane will be called off, Malaysian, Chinese and Australian officials said in a statement last week.

Close to $180 million has been thrown into the salvage operation since the Boeing 777 with 239 people on board went missing in Mar 2014 while flying from Kuala Lumpur to Beijing (TD 25 Mar 14).

To date 110,000km² have been searched.

Australia's Transport Minister Darren Chester said the three countries still "remained hopeful" the plane would be found before the search area was exhausted and that it was a "difficult decision" to suspend the search,

News.com.au reported.

MEANWHILE, news has emerged over the weekend that MH370's pilot Zaharie Ahmad Shah used a home-built flight simulator to steer himself in a similar route that the missing plane is believed to have taken just weeks before the disappearance.

The findings published by New York magazine were allegedly sourced from a confidential document from Malaysian police investigating the incident.

"We found a flight path, that lead to the southern Indian Ocean, among the numerous other flight paths charted on the flight simulator, that could be of interest," the document said.

A CATHAY Pacific flight from Hong Kong to Bangkok was delayed by three hours over the weekend after a disgruntled passenger tore a hole in the ceiling of its new plane.

The passenger reportedly lost his temper after failing to find overhead storage and forcibly yanked a fixed plate from the ceiling, revealing a gaping hole.

The affected plane had to undergo emergency repairs before take off.

It was later revealed that Cathay's new Airbus A350 aircraft does not in fact have overhead lockers for centre D, E and G seats on rows 70-74.
