NT seeing tourism boom

EXCLUSIVE

THE Northern Territory is seeing swelling demand in both international and domestic visitation on the back of a two-year $103 million “turbocharging tourism” investment made by the NT Government.

Speaking with Travel Daily in Darwin this week, Tourism NT GM Industry Development Scott Lovett said that growth had spiked 12% for domestic and 7% for international visitation over the past two quarters.

Whilst the UK, US, Germany and Japan are the leading source markets, Lovett said “the direct flights from Shenzhen has resulted in 35% growth out of China in a 12-month period, off a low base but it is now our number five source market.

“We think it’ll be within our top three by the end of this calendar year,” he said.

International travellers are spending on average 21 days in the NT, making the territory the Australian destination with “the longest length of stay”, according to Lovett.

Domestically, travellers are spending an average of seven days, with Uluru continuing as a key driver for visitation.

Lovett said the economic contribution that tourism pumps into the economy was $2.4 billion last calendar year, with that figure growing and the sector now employing 16,000 people.

“It’s an area in particular that many indigenous people want to be involved in as tourism does a lot to protect the social, cultural and environmental elements of indigenous communities.”

Lovett conceded that more work needed to be done with travel agents and tour operators to grasp traveller trends and product development.

“We’ve got our own research on what consumers are telling us, but we need to know what it is they’re telling the trade.

“Then we need to translate that back from a development perspective,” he said.

“We’d like to do more with the tour operators and we’d like to drive that conversation more.”

Marriott keeps growing

MARRIOTT International is not going to stop with the current brands it has in Australia and is pushing forward with extensive growth plans, Marriott International VP Global Sales, Asia Pacific (excl Greater China) Ramesh Daryanani told TD.

"We're looking to introduce more in Australia...because we think there's opportunity for growth for the future," he said.

Daryanani flagged ambitions to introduce the Renaissance brand down under, along with JW Marriott, BVLGARI Hotels & Resorts and "quite a long list" of brands which "haven't made it to the market yet".

He said Cairns and Canberra are two key cities Marriott International would like to break into, along with some coastal resort destinations.

Marriott International currently has 31 properties in operation in the Pacific region and is on track to its goal of 50 hotels across the Pacific region by 2020.

In Australia, the company has 20 hotels in operation and a further 19 in the pipeline.

Daryanani said Marriott's rapid growth would provide the industry with opportunities to drive growth in both inbound and outbound travel.

He flagged potential for the number of inbound tourists for Australia to double, provided the right infrastructure and hotels are in place, along with the resources to support the growth.

"It'll mean more travel for the industry here but it'll also increase outbound opportunities," he said.

The company is also "working hard" to get some inventory in the Asia Pacific for Marriott's Airbnb competitor Homes & Villas by Marriott Int'l (TD 01 May).

"This was an area that we never delved into but as we've done our research we've found that there is a niche out there with luxury homes and villas that we can tap into," he said.

"You can book through the Marriott system, you can earn your loyalty points and we've taken care of certain aspects of service that were issues with other platforms."

New NZeTA requirement

ABOUT 1.5 million visitors to New Zealand each year are expected to be impacted by the introduction of the country's New Zealand Electronic Travel Authority (NZeTA), which will be required for travel from 01 Oct.

Details of the initiative were announced yesterday in Rotorua at the country's annual TRENZ trade show, with Immigration New Zealand spokesman Nick Aldous saying the NZeTA "aims to improve border security and prevent anyone who may pose a potential risk from travelling to New Zealand".

Effective 01 Oct 2019, passengers who are eligible to travel to New Zealand without a visa will be required to hold an NZeTA before departure, requiring them to answer questions about their criminal conviction history and the purpose of their trip.

"Currently visitors who are able to fly to New Zealand without a visa only receive light-touch screening at check-in, and cruise ship passengers and crew are not screened at all," Aldous said.

The NZeTA will cost NZ$9 when requested via a new mobile app, or NZ$12 when requested through immigration.govt.nz, with the NZ Government's NZ$35 International Visitor Conservation and Tourism Levy also charged at the same time.

New Zealand and Australian passport holders, and those who already hold a valid visa for New Zealand, will not need an NZeTA.

Complicating things further, Australian permanent residents will require an NZeTA but do not need to pay the NZ$35 levy.

Visit Dallas scandal

THE CEO and CFO of Visit Dallas have both resigned, in the latest stage of an ongoing investigation which has questioned the organisation's management of city tax dollars.

CEO Phillip Jones and CFO Matthew Jones (no relation) have stepped aside in what is being described as a "mutual decision" after a "scathing" audit.

Visit Dallas receives about US$30 million a year to market the Texas destination, with Phillip Jones' $700,000 salary questioned along with high travel and meal expense claims.

Window Seat

THERE may be a few red faces in the Air New Zealand Auckland head office today, after widespread media attention for a decision by the airline's senior executives to implement a self-imposed salary freeze.

Newspapers delightedly took the opportunity to note that it was only a freeze, not a reduction, with CEO Christopher Luxon being the highest paid CEO of any company listed on the NZ stock exchange last year, taking home remuneration of NZ$4.2 million.

An update to staff this week from Luxon detailed a range of measures as the company looks for savings of up to 5% in the face of rising fuel prices, saying "as part of that overhead cost review, the executives & I have voluntarily frozen our salaries for at least the next 12 months".

The PR backfire will also impact Luxon's nine-strong executive team, including Chief Commercial Officer Cam Wallace, who each earned between NZ$1.2m and $2.8m.

Union groups also leapt on the comments, saying they had raised concerns about high executive salaries with the Air NZ leadership several times.

"There are still workers at Air New Zealand earning below the living wage," said a spokesperson for the E tu union.

Samoa on sale

"We will now be able to offer departures on the iconic Orient Express, a renowned product that is much-suited to our market and will work well as an addition to our programs such as our popular Rail Adventure in Switzerland," said McGregor.
