Anthem arrives in Syd

ROYAL Caribbean's Anthem of the Seas has made its debut Down Under, with the ship arriving in Sydney this morning.

The Quantum-class vessel will homeport in Sydney for the 2025-26 summer season, offering 24 itineraries ranging from weekend escapes to 18-night adventures across Australia, the South Pacific and New Zealand.

Highlights include a five-night holiday to Hobart, nine- to 12-night sailings across New Zealand, and nine- and 11-night Christmas and New Year cruises.

This season will also mark the debut of six Wiggly-themed holidays (TD 12 Mar), exclusive to Royal Caribbean and featuring many Wiggly friends across Anthem and Voyager.

Goodbye event no-shows

WAYFINDER Travel has introduced the Waypoint Connect app, a new neutral platform for agents and suppliers to help maximise the value of trade events and ease the burden of digital administration.

The benefits of the app include helping advisors better coordinate their event invites by bringing a calendar into one system, while suppliers can lower the number of no-shows and synergise their invite processes.

Wayfinder Travel founder Sarah Webster said in an environment where advisors have to "spin too many plates" and suppliers struggle with "endless emails and overlapping invitations", Waypoint Connect will help everyone operate more efficiently by bringing travel suppliers and advisors together into "one calm, well-organised place".

Webster stressed the new app is not designed to compete with consortia portals, trade media, or specialist services, but rather act as a neutral coordination layer to assist the travel sector operate more efficiently while maintaining control of their own profiles.

Features include a centralised trade-events calendar, QR check-ins to verify attendance, tools for suppliers to share updates, and a fluid advisor contact register.

Pre-registration is now open, with early adopter pricing in place for founding suppliers.

ANA grounds AirJapan

ANA Group's experiment to offer a carrier that walked the fine line between full-service and budget is over, with AirJapan to be axed from 01 Apr 2026.

The airline was only launched a little under two years ago (TD 04 Aug 2023), hailed at the time by ANA as a medium-haul operator that would embody the Japanese ideal of 'flying thoughtfully'.

However, the parent company of All Nippon Airways said the dumping of AirJapan was needed as the business looks to restructure its multi-brand strategy, which also includes low-cost player Peach in its stable.

"This decision is aimed at maximising the entire group's profitability and competitiveness while flexibly responding to recent changes in the business environment," ANA Group said.

The soon-to-be-defunct brand has been operating flights from Tokyo Narita to hubs such as Bangkok, Singapore and Seoul, using B787-8 aircraft. AB

THE Ritz-Carlton Yacht Collection's CEO Jim Murren has confirmed the new luxury cruise entrant is eyeing a listing on the New York Stock Exchange within the "next two to three years".

Speaking at the Skift Global East Forum, the cruise line's chief also suggested there was a possibility of being acquired by "one of the big cruise companies".

The Ritz-Carlton Yacht Collection has been active in targeting the Australian market this year, opening a Sydney office and appointing two reservation agents in Jun (TD 13 Jun).

Vice President and General Manager APAC, Seb Seward, previously told Travel Daily the early reaction from the Australian market had been "extremely positive", with travel agents the key to its local success.

ADL-AKL takes off

Eurostar challenged

THE human headline Richard Branson has vowed to "shake up" cross-Channel train services in Europe after regulators approved Virgin Group to share an east London depot with Eurostar.

Obtaining the key clearance paves the way for Branson's Virgin Trains to proceed with plans to order 12 high-speed trains on Channel routes, set to operate in 2030 (TD 15 Aug).

"It's time to end this 30-year monopoly and bring some Virgin magic to the cross-Channel route," Branson declared.

"We're going to shake up the cross-Channel route for good and give consumers the choice they deserve," he added.

Rail capacity in the tunnel is currently only used at about 50%.

A POLISH tourist in Venice is adamant Google Maps is to blame for her fall into one of the city's famous canals - not her poor sense of direction.

Wiktorija Guzenda shared video of her holding her phone as she walked down a few steps toward a canal before toppling into the water, attracting thousands of likes.

"When Google Maps says to go straight but you're in Venice," the hapless tourist captioned the viral clip.

One not-so-charitable commenter on the video said: "Maybe stop blindly following a GPS and actually look around and use your brain."

Qantas ups Vanuatu

QANTAS Airways has increased capacity on its Brisbane-Port Vila flights, which will depart daily from Mar through to Oct 2026.

The additional services will more than double capacity between the two cities throughout the travel period, with more than 35,500 seats offered over the season.

Qantas will operate the service using a mix of E190 and Boeing 737 aircraft.

Himalayan luxury by foot

WA-BASED travel company Walk into Luxury has launched new private walking journeys through Bhutan and Nepal, in response to growing demand for nature-based travel.

Guests can expect private guided hiking paired with premium dining and luxury lodging at the likes of Como and Six Senses as they journey through the Himalayas.

Highlight experiences include the famed Tigers Nest hike and Trans Bhutan Trail, and a special walk near Lawala Mountain Pass that ends with a private lunch in the forest overlooking Gangtey Valley.

For those keen to experience Everest, a heli-breakfast with a view to the world's highest peak is also an option.

"Bhutan is full of contrasts, it's a hidden gem, seemingly untouched by the modern world, yet it is home to some of the world's best hotels dotted among its remote valleys," said Nikki King, CEO and founder of Walk into Luxury.

"It is the ultimate luxury walking destination," she added.

The launch of Bhutan and Nepal is part of Walk into Luxury's global expansion, which was recently announced following the investment by APT Travel Group's Lou and Rob Tandy into the company.

Walk into Luxury is also looking to add Italy's Dolomites, Sri Lanka, Peru and the Galapagos to its portfolio, which already includes Australia, New Zealand, Japan, Norway, and Patagonia. JM

Avis pledges reset

AVIS Budget Group CEO Brian Choi has conceded the global car rental company has drifted from delivering top-notch customer experience, promising a "hard reset" of client standards globally.

"We try harder" is in our DNA, but during the survival years of COVID, we drifted from that bedrock principle and now it's time to return to it with intent."

Choi's comments follow the first quarterly revenue gain from Avis in more than two years.

China Southern Airlines strengthens partnerships with local agents

GOOD times, great partners, and even better journeys ahead.

CHINA Southern Airlines and Brisbane Airport recently hosted an engaging product presentation event at By.Artisans in Brisbane, welcoming around 50 local agents for an evening of networking, product update, and fun.

The event provided an excellent opportunity for the sales team to share the latest updates on China Southern Airlines' growing route network, products, and services.

The airline offers an STPC program for eligible transit passengers and complimentary city tours in Guangzhou.

Attendees showed great interest and actively interacted throughout the presentation, expressing confidence in future cooperation with China Southern Airlines. To make the evening even more engaging, the team organised a quiz session featuring questions about the airline.

The atmosphere was full of excitement, culminating in a lucky draw where one delighted winner walked away with the top prize - two free return tickets from Brisbane to China.

The event was a great success, not only in strengthening relationships with local agency partners but also in reinforcing China Southern Airlines' brand presence in the market.

The sales team's effort and creativity helped make the event both informative and enjoyable, leaving attendees with a lasting positive impression of the airline.

Reining in expenses

THE rise of business travel this year is increasing the pressure on companies to manage costs, ensure compliance, and enhance the employee experience, according to SAP Concur.

The SAAS company's 7th Annual Global Business Travel Report found outbound business travel volumes from Australia rose 12.4% in the first half of this year, compared to the PCP.

"This resurgence in business travel also intensifies the challenge of managing costs, compliance, and employee experience," SAP Concur MD Jonathan Beeby said.

"Finance leaders are under pressure to fund growing volumes of travel while maintaining transparency," he added.

PTMs see more of Bali

AFTER attending TravelManagers' national conference last month in Bali, several personal travel managers explored the island beyond the conference location in Nusa Dua.

Intrepid hosted eight advisors on a seven-day trip that explored Bali's scenic interior, accompanied by Melissa Duffy from TravelManagers' National Partnership Office.

The agents took part in experiences such as watching a traditional purification ritual at Gunung Kawi Sebatu Temple, cycling through quiet villages and snorkelling off the coast of Amed.

A second group travelled to the island of Sumba, where they were hosted by La Collection at Cap Karoso, which was crowned Best Resort in Indonesia by Conde Nast Traveller.

According to the agents, visiting a nearby local village was one of the highlights of their trip.

Another collective of eight PTMs were invited by the Legian Seminyak for a pre-conference inspection and lunch, where they had the chance to familiarise themselves with the property and hear the latest product news from the business. JHM
